

Shop 'til You Drop

At Macy's West's annual Passport event, which focuses on raising awareness and money for HIV and AIDS organizations, guests were treated to performances by Dita Von Teese and the Spirit of Uganda African dance troupe, which teamed up with celebrity choreographer Brian Friedman for an unforgettable dance segment. Downtown, fashionistas were out for the Barneys store grand opening in San Francisco, which also doubled as a benefit for the Nick Traina Foundation. In Mill Valley, Julie Zener welcomed shoppers for a trunk show featuring swimsuits from Asha Couture and jewelry designs by Sarah Suloff. At Item Shoes in Larkspur, owner Joy Goldberg and Jennifer Wilson of Merrill Lynch teamed up for their first annual fundraiser for Wardrobe for Opportunity, which provides professional clothing to low-income job seekers. In San Anselmo, Kismet boutique owners Erica Miller and Barbara Dryden celebrated with customers their first year of being open. Across the street at Blanc, owner Nancy Blanc Mayer held a trunk show for Rachel Clinnick's jewelry line Thalia.

A photograph of two women, Erica Miller and Barbara Dryden, smiling in a boutique setting. They are standing in front of a clothing rack. A red banner in the top right corner of the image reads "KISMET BOUTIQUE".

KISMET BOUTIQUE

Erica Miller, Barbara Dryden